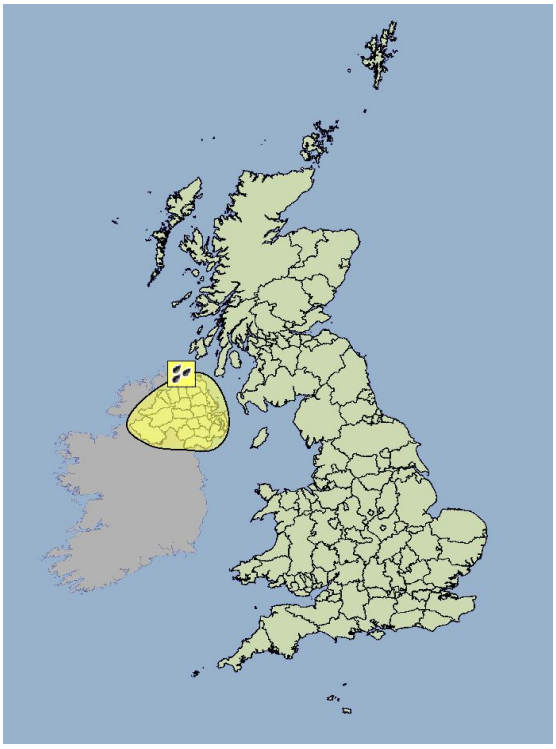
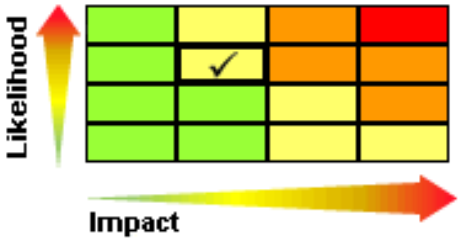
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Rain across southern areas will turn more showery later this morning, with heavy showers and isolated thunderstorms developing through the afternoon, before dying out slowly this evening. Although some places will be dry, there is the potential for 10-15 mm of rain within an hour from the heavier showers and very locally 25 mm in 2 to 3 hours.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 11:00 on Fri, 25th Aug 2017 until 23:00 on Fri, 25th Aug 2017

Although some places will miss most of the showers, some heavy showers and isolated thunderstorms will develop during today. Given the recent wet conditions, there is the possibility of localised flooding of homes and businesses as well as susceptible roads.
